

CAMP GAME – Silent Ball

Silent ball is a camp game played to unwind while still getting physical movement. It's also really good for something to do inside when the weather isn't great. The objective of the game is to toss a ball amongst a group of participants who must remain silent. You are eliminated from the game if you talk, drop a direct pass, or throw a bad pass. Silent ball is a great game for relieving tension and playing together inside. And you might just figure out some ways to communicate with others without saying a word.

Supplies:

Anything you can toss. A ball. This can be any ball, but a soft ball is preferred. If you don't have a ball a stuffy, a rolled-up pair of socks, or a balled-up piece of paper will work.

Silent ball begins with players spread out in view of each other. Players throw the ball to any other player, who must catch it. If a player drops the ball when it is thrown to them, or talks at any time, they are "out" but must remain silent. If a thrown ball is uncatchable the player that threw the ball is out. If the ball is thrown to a player that is out that player is back in and the player that threw the ball is out.
